It isn't just brick, it's Boren.

All brick look very much alike, and feel very much alike, and work very much alike.
Why then, do more people demand Boren Brick for their homes?
Because all brick are not alike.
There's a world of difference in quality, in workmanship, and in performance that stands Boren above all others.
Why do so many people demand brick with our name on them?
Because their homes have their name on them.
You see, home-owners know what home-builders know:
It isn't just brick, it's Boren.

EXPOSAIC DELIVERS HARD-WEAR TO IBM.

IBM building—Research Triangle Park, Architect—O'Brien/Atkins Associates, P.A., Chapel Hill, N.C., Contractor—Romeo-Guest, Greensboro, N.C.

It makes sense that a solid company like IBM would choose one of the strongest, most durable building materials available for their facility in the Research Triangle Park. IBM did just that when they selected a building with pre-cast architectural wall panels by Exposaic.

The construction team counted on Exposaic to produce a building material that would project a strong image over a long period of time. Exposaic responded by delivering durable and attractive concrete panels that do not require a lot of maintenance.

Many decision makers, like the construction team for this IBM project, are realizing we can help them with their building problems. With over 25 years in the manufacture of quality concrete products, Exposaic has the experience building professionals can depend on.

Our structural products are made of pre-stressed concrete, a material that combines the compressive strength of concrete with the tensile strength of steel, which means you get a material strong enough for virtually any job. Builders also know that when they work with Exposaic Industries, they get one of the safest, most dependable building materials on the market.

What's more, because our materials are custom made for each individual job in our own quality controlled factory, they all fit together perfectly when they get to the site. And no amount of rain, sleet or snow can stop us from building them.

And that can mean a number of important advantages to any builder. It means you can drastically reduce your construction costs and labor costs. It means your risks are greatly reduced. It means you can get pre-determined prices and a shorter borrowing period on the construction loan which can significantly reduce costs.

So the next time you're building a new building or expanding an existing one, give us a call. Because once you've worked on a project with us, you may never want to build with anyone else again.

Architectural Education

Three N.C. schools offer programs for professionals

Three universities in North Carolina offer programs leading to degrees for architects or engineers.

At N.C. State University in Raleigh, for instance, the department of architecture has three degree programs, including a master of architecture degree.

The University of North Carolina at Charlotte has approximately 270 students enrolled in its College of Architecture.

And N.C. Agricultural and Technical State University, Greensboro, has approximately 200 students in its engineering program.

Here are summaries of the programs at the three universities:

N.C. STATE

The department of architecture at N.C. State University in Raleigh was established in 1948 as one of two original academic components in the School of Design.

Under the guidance of founding Dean Henry L. Kamphoefner, the School of Design experienced a long period of creative and intellectual development. Designers and theorists such as Buckminster Fuller, Matthew Nowicki, Lewis Mumford, Eduardo Catalano and others joined the faculty in the school's early years and helped build a reputation for innovation and experimentation.

Throughout this early period, the architecture department offered a single degree, the five-year bachelor of architecture. In the late 1960s, the department altered its course and adopted the now-common "4+2" master of architecture curriculum to accommodate emerging professional and academic issues and to provide new opportunities for students to pursue non-traditional as well as traditional educational paths. The bachelor of architecture degree was phased out in 1972.

The department of architecture offers three degree programs:

1. Bachelor of Environmental Design in Architecture (BEDA)—a four-year pre-professional curriculum that serves as the foundation for the two advanced programs. The curriculum includes a balance of general studies (English, mathematics, science and humanities), design studio courses and architectural support courses (history, technology, methods and theory).

2. Bachelor of Architecture (B.ARCH)—a one-year professional curriculum that builds on the four-year BEDA program.

3. Master of Architecture (M.ARCH)—a two-year professional curriculum that follows a four-year pre-professional program in architecture. Additionally, applicants with the B.ARCH degree are accepted for an intensive one-year program, and applicants with degrees in non-architectural fields may apply for a four-year graduate program.

The M.ARCH is a first professional degree accredited by the National Architectural Accrediting Board. As such, it satisfies educational requirements for professional certification established by the various states and the National Council of Architectural Registration Boards.

The B.ARCH program, which will be examined for initial accreditation in 1985, will provide similar qualification for professional registration.

Admission to the architecture degree programs is competitive.

Application to the undergraduate BEDA program is made to the School of Design, which annually admits 100 to 120 freshmen and transfer students to the common first-year "Design Fundamentals" program. Students begin their architectural studies in the second year. For information about undergraduate admissions standards and procedures, contact the School of Design, NCSU, Box 7701, Raleigh, N.C. 27695-7701 or call (919) 737-2201.

Admission to the B.ARCH and M.ARCH programs is by application to the department of architecture. Creative ability, superior academic achievement and promise of professional accomplishment are criteria sought in applicants. For additional information, contact Robert Burns, Head/Department of Architecture, School of Design, NCSU, Box 7701, Raleigh, N.C. 27695-7701 or call (919) 737-2206.

There are approximately 600 students in the School of Design, 300 of whom are in the architecture department. From 200 to 230 students are in the BEDA program, with the remainder in the advanced programs. The architecture department awarded 49 BEDA, 18 B.ARCH and 16 M.ARCH degrees in 1983-84.

The architecture faculty consists of 14 full-time members (with one position currently vacant) and a number of part-time adjunct faculty members who typically teach one course.

UNCC

The College of Architecture at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte was founded in 1969 and graduated its first students with professional degrees in 1976, the same year Charles C. Hight was named dean.

In July, the school received its second consecutive five-year accreditation from the National Architectural Accreditation Board.

The curriculum is organized so that students acquire a common body of general and architectural knowledge and skills while investigating societal and professional issues and subjects, many of which are of individual interest.

To assist students who desire a secondary concentration, the program is structured so a person may develop a double major or minor in another field such as engineering, earth science, business administration or behavioral science.

The curriculum is organized in three sections:

1. The Foundation Program—During the first two years, students are enrolled in general educational and architectural courses. The comprehensive studios, which occur each semester, focus upon acquiring the fundamentals of graphic development, exploration of visual form, development of problem solving and conceptualization skills as well as architectural form relationships with physical environmental, human needs and technology.

2. The Middle Program—In the first semester of the third year, all students use the previously acquired knowledges and skills in the holistic design of relatively small-scaled buildings which are site specific. These endeavors include investigation of various architectural issues and ideas. In the following three semesters, students enroll in optional "topical studios."

Also, students take at least four architectural elective courses. These seminar/lab options include: exploration of applied visual form, graphic development, architectural readings and theory, urban design, architectural preservation, solar energy, programming, light/acoustics, study of communities and real estate development.

Upon completion of the fourth year, the bachelor of arts in architecture degree is awarded and students may apply for the Fifth Year.

3. Advanced Program—The fifth-year program, which is composed of students from UNCC and other schools, provides a balance between individual and collective professional studies. In the fall semester, students engage in a series of common design studies for the purpose of further developing their abilities to conceptualize, solve problems, and deal holistically with architectural projects set in natural and urban environments. At the same time, students complete selection of their individual thesis and develop an appropriate program.

In the spring semester, students execute the design of their architectural thesis projects and study contemporary architectural office practice. In both semesters, significant issues of architecture are examined through seminar courses. Thus, as in the fifth year is structured to provide a balance between theory and application.

Upon completion, the professional bachelor of architecture degree is awarded.

The full-time faculty of 18 is augmented by a comprehensive visiting architects program.

The 270 students enrolled in the College of Architecture include a freshman class of approximately 80 students, one third of whom have prior college experience. Selection of students is based on SAT scores, prior academic record, the portfolio of creative work, the quality of the applicant's letter of intent and a personal interview.

Admission to the fifth-year program requires completion of a bachelor of arts in architecture, bachelor of environmental design or other related studies. Consideration for acceptance includes study of the student's previous academic record and professional activities, the personal statement of study intent and a portfolio of creative work. When appropriate, a personal interview may be required.

N.C. A&T

The department of architectural engineering was founded at N.C. Agricultural and Technical State University, Greensboro, in 1918.

It has been accredited as an engineering program for nearly 20 years.

Strong emphasis is placed on training in the building sciences and on training in engineering as it applies to the design and construction of buildings, says department chairman William A. Streat Jr.

Instruction in the department is organized under four divisions:

1. Graphics, architectural design and architectural history;
2. Environmental control, electrical and mechanical equipment of buildings;
3. Professional practice, management and materials and methods of construction, and
4. Structures.

The five-year program in architectural engineering offers 160 semester hours leading to the bachelor of science degree.

Enrollment has leveled to approximately 175 to 200 undergraduate students. Students are admitted to the department based on class rank and scores on standard aptitude tests.

Faculty members have backgrounds in city and urban planning, structural engineering, mechanical engineering and architecture.

More information can be obtained by writing: William A. Streat Jr., chairman, Department of Architectural Engineering, N.C. A&T State University, Greensboro, N.C. 27411. □

Board of Architecture Has Governed Since 1915

The N.C. Board of Architecture, established by the legislature in 1915, is responsible for administering the practice of architecture in the state.

The board is comprised of seven members appointed by the governor, five of whom are licensed architects. Two non-architects represent the public at large.

Current board members and officers are: John L. Atkins III, Chapel Hill, president; Harvey S. Gantt, Charlotte, vice president; Tai Y. Lee, Waynesville, secretary/treasurer; Herbert P. McKim, Wilmington, member; Lloyd G. Walter Jr., Winston-Salem, member; John C. Laughridge, Marion, public member; and Wanda S. Caldwell, Asheville, public member.

North Carolina requires registered architects to be at least 18 years old, have a degree in architecture from a college or university with an approved five-year degree program, be of good moral character and have successfully completed a licensing examination in architecture as specified by the rule of the board. Equivalent professional education and practical training may, in some cases, qualify an applicant to take the examination.

Individuals holding a current license for the practice of architecture from another state and a certificate of qualification issued by the National Council of Architectural Registration Boards (NCARB) may, upon application and at the discretion of the board, be licensed without taking the written examination.

Additional information on the Board of Architecture may be obtained by contacting:

National Council Sets Certification Standards

The National Council of Architectural Registration Boards was established in 1920 to assist member boards in carrying out their duties, to foster the enactment of uniform architectural laws, to develop examinations and establish standards for certification requirements in education and training, to perfect its procedures for verifying the qualifications of applicants and determining their eligibility for certification and to establish and maintain reciprocal registration between states having registration laws.

The NCARB is a non-profit corporation with all legally constituted boards of architecture in the United States as members.

To be eligible for NCARB certification, architects must submit satisfactory evidence that they comply with the standards for education, training, examination and character and have been registered by a member board.

The NCARB will, upon request of an individual architect, secure, authenticate and record factual data of the applicant's education, training, practice and character. This record will be forwarded to any state board upon request of the applicant.

Certification shall be given an applicant holding a council record verifying that the applicant has complied with the council's standards of education, training, practice and character; and that the applicant has passed an examination conforming to the council's standards of content, extent and length of time.

Certification by the NCARB is a recommendation to all registration authorities that registration be granted to the holder without further examination. Most member boards accept NCARB certification as conclusive evidence of an architect's eligibility of registration. It is, however, not a national registration.

Complete information on compilation of a council record and obtaining council certification can be obtained from:

Architectural Foundation Aids Educational Causes

The North Carolina Architectural Foundation was started in December 1963 to provide resources for educational and charitable causes.

One of its early purposes was to assist the North Carolina Chapter of the American Institute of Architects rehabilitate its Tower building as an historic place.

The foundation has collected and distributed funds for student fellowships and scholarships and for support of university faculties. In addition, the foundation awards a fellowship to the N.C. State University School of Design in honor of William Henley Deitrick.

Although the foundation no longer takes direct responsibility for soliciting contributions from architects for the North Carolina Design Foundation at N.C. State or for fund-raising at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte, it continues to provide financial assistance for some education programs in architecture and architectural drafting at schools in the state.

The foundation accepts and solicits contributions and bequests to be used for purposes in keeping with the standards and regulations of the foundation.

WHAT DOUGLAS AIRPORT DID TO KEEP ITS ENERGY COSTS FROM SOARING.

When they began to plan Charlotte's new airport, the people at the Airport Authority expressed great interest in an area that is also of great interest to us at Duke Power.

Energy efficiency.

Out of this mutual interest came a cooperative working relationship between their engineers and our experts. Which eventually resulted in an innovative airport facility designed to keep energy costs to an absolute minimum.

For instance, skylighting is used wherever possible to utilize the sun's light. Energy storage devices are employed to store energy during off-peak hours as a way of cutting the airport's peak demand charges. Extra insulation in the walls and ceilings results in lowered heating and cooling costs. And much more.

The significant lowering of energy costs produced by these efforts hasn't gone unnoticed. Douglas Airport won the Southeastern Electric Exchange's 1983 Energy Efficiency Award.

Obviously, you don't have to have a facility as large as Douglas Airport to realize significant energy savings. Nor do you have to have a new building. There are lots of energy saving ideas you can put to work today. And we'd like to help.

For more information on making your facility more energy efficient, contact your local Duke Power office.

"We've assigned one of our best Technical Service Representatives to your next job."

You want the buildings you design to be as energy-efficient as possible. And that takes a special type of expertise. You need someone well-versed in the new technologies, the latest systems and the new energy alternatives.

To assist your own engineers in this important area, we have a Piedmont Natural Gas Technical Service Representative standing by. When you give him the go-ahead, he'll conduct a thorough Energy Systems Analysis of your project. Your free Analysis will include a computerized load calculation and energy cost comparison of the alternative systems which can be matched to your design requirements. Life cycle cost studies are also available.

We're ready when you are. To put one of our best Technical Service Representatives to work on your next job, just call our Technical Services Department, toll-free. From North Carolina, 1-800-532-0462. From South Carolina: 1-800-438-8410. Within Charlotte: 364-3120
